

Editorial Note

I am honored to be a member of the MLA Journal of Arts, Commerce and Sciences (m-JACS), an association of ardent experts committed to serving interdisciplinary approaches of arts, science, and commerce in a lively way. m-JACS is already started receiving attention from the scientific community on a global scale. In the struggle for survival, living things defend themselves in various ways. As a result, since the dawn of time, humans have become familiar with all the interdisciplinary approaches towards AI, MI or computational or plants or human with their literary or artistic or commercial way and other fields out of curiosity. For instance, people have chosen a number of strategies throughout history to find food and to cope dealing effectively with human sorrow using computers or other natural sources.

In an effort to promote information sharing in the area of fundamental and applied research, the MLA Journal of Arts, Commerce, and Sciences (m-JACS) provides a platform which is a quarterly online journal with peer review. m-JACS is founded with the intention of sustaining and advancing the body of knowledge from all branches of fundamental, commerce, humanities, and related sciences. m-JACS has a broad reach because it is a multidisciplinary branch that involves knowledge from all the interdisciplinary fields, which have further fused to create a number of new subjects, fields of study, and technological advancements. We want the entire scientific community to collaborate with us on publications and to contribute to our prestigious open-access journal.
