

March 10, 2025

Editorial Note

Dear Readers, Researchers, and Contributors,

In recent months, significant changes have reshaped the academic publishing landscape. The University Grants Commission (UGC) has discontinued the UGC CARE list, advising universities to independently select qualified peer-reviewed journals. This shift aligns with our vision—where premier institutions like ours offer high-standard journals such as mJACS to facilitate the dissemination of quality research through rigorous peer review.

We are also pleased to share that we have engaged with several indexing platforms to enhance the visibility of our published research. We anticipate sharing further progress in the next issue, reinforcing our commitment to academic integrity and accessibility. As a proud Crossref member, we ensure every submission undergoes similarity checks using iThenticate and a thorough peer review process to uphold the highest research standards. Our current indexing platforms, along with their logos, are displayed on our website.

The Maharani Lakshmi Ammanni College for Women, publisher of mJACS, remains steadfast in its commitment to fostering intellectual inquiry, even amid evolving challenges. We also express our profound thanks to the management of Maharani Lakshmi Ammanni College for Women. Without their unwavering support, this journey of academic excellence and research dissemination would not have been possible. Their commitment to fostering a strong research culture and providing the necessary resources has been instrumental in the growth and success of mJACS.

Your unwavering support fuels our mission to innovate and advance academic research. We thank you for being part of this journey and look forward to your continued engagement in shaping the future of scholarly publishing.

Warm regards,

Dr. Sushil Kumar Middha

Editor-in-Chief

mJACS

March 10, 2025